

Certificate in Language Learning and Teaching

Students in the Ph.D. program are eligible to pursue the Certificate in Language Learning and Teaching, which is awarded separately. The certificate requires two semesters of teaching in a language department or writing program, one course in the methodology of language teaching, and two other courses on issues related to language learning and teaching.

Requirements:

- Two semesters of teaching in a language department or writing program (The Linguistics Department will help students locate instructional opportunities).
- 1 course in Methodology of Language Teaching.
- 2 other courses on such topics as Bilingualism, Second Language Acquisition, Dialects, Language and Culture etc. (preparation for teaching courses of interest to students in language/literature/culture departments).
- Optional: Students are encouraged to create a teaching portfolio which could include exercises and other teaching aids for an existing course or a syllabus for a new course. If substantive enough, this could substitute for one of the elective courses.

List of Possible Courses for the Certificate: Note that this list is not exhaustive. Also, please consult with the GPD in advance to see if a course will qualify for fulfilling the requirements for the Certificate.

Possible Courses
	15:253:522	Bilingual-Bicultural Education	Other Courses
	15:253:537	Sociolinguistics	Other Courses
	16:165:506	Chinese Across the Curriculum	Methodology
	16:165:510	Teaching Chinese through Modern Fiction	Other Courses
	16:940:581	Research Methods in Second Language Acquisition	Methodology
	16:940:501	Methodology of Language Teaching and Research	Methodology
	16:420:511	Methodology of Language Teaching and Research	Methodology